Key Insights

Delaware's African American-owned credit union sector includes 1 active institution, Stepping Stones Community, with $5,815,448 in total assets and 2,625 members in 2025. Although the state's sector is small and entirely dependent on a single institution, the dramatic growth since 2016 in both assets (344.27%) and membership (683.6%) suggests strong momentum and rising community trust. For the Black community, this points to the important role a single thriving African American-owned financial institution can play in expanding financial inclusion, supporting local economic empowerment, and creating a stronger foundation for community wealth-building.
