Key Insights

Florida's African American-owned credit union sector includes 3 active institutions with $38,661,056 in total assets and 5,062 members in 2025, led by Florida A & M University, which accounts for $28,450,143 in assets and 3,918 members. The state's footprint is compact, but the leading institutions show real financial strength, especially in asset growth, suggesting that Florida's Black credit union presence is anchored more by a few relatively solid organizations than by a large network. That gives the sector a visible base of stability, though its reach and long-term influence depend heavily on the continued health of just a small number of institutions.
